

Scholars at the Institute of Sociology at Duisburg-Essen study contemporary change in work and employment, organization and social inequality, and the social implications of globalisation from a comparative and transnational perspective.

Global and Transnational Studies at the University of Duisburg-Essen is focussed on broadening the sociological imagination beyond the national borders of most sociological theories and empirical data to generate new understandings of cross-border social interactions and interrelations. At the upper division levels graduate and post-doctoral programs focus on the world risk society and global cooperation.

In various disciplines Duisburg-Essen is amongst the ten leading universities in terms of research performance. One of the five key research focuses of the University is the Transformation of Contemporary Societies.
