

International Conference on Women portrayed in Society and History

College of Humanities- University of Suleimani

Under the auspices of: Prof. Dr. Kosar Mohammed Ali
Conference Chair: Asst. Prof. Dr. Pave Jamil Ahmad

Women have played a central role in the livelihood of ancient and modern societies, in which they have been able to prove their capabilities in the diversion of societies' tracks of change in a positive way. They were always present, both as an active subject and also as a peer. Women have proved they have been a fundamental element in the great cultural changes of society.

At the same time, women are the scale on which the progress and development of societies are shown as they are one main component of society and an important element of social, political and cultural development. They are assigned the central role for education, for supervision and emotional interactions, which is why philosophical classics such as Socrates believed that the care of women was more important than the care of men, since the education of a woman was the education of a society. But the range of women's roles and agency is far from broad. Despite this, free, conscious, and courageous women have become visible in history and have influenced the whole society.

Basing on this, we think that reading and understanding the past and present of societies from the window of the impact of women on different aspects of life, needs to be a main topic of academic researches, so that the barriers that impede women from acting and taking their role in the society can be identified and removed. It is also of great significance to clearly show the brilliant side of women's contribution to the development and improvement of life and free the image of women from ideological, religious and cultural stereotypes.

Kurdish women have received less attention in research. At times they have been the focus of interest for travelers and Kurdologists, but stereotypical representations and popular imaginings have failed to show the complexity and multidimensionality of women's living conditions. Recently, there has been a renewed interest in the forgotten research on and with Kurdish women, which contributes to their visibility. The conference of Women portrayed in Society and History organized by the College of Humanities of Suleimani University is trying to shed the proper light that the role of the Kurdish women plays in the society deserves.
